

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 28 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Showers in north, some rain in south. Cool for most.

Today:

Areas of rain in parts of central, south, and southwest UK. Heavy at times particularly in the south. Showers feeding into northern parts but good shelter in the west. Breezy in the east and feeling chilly for most.

Tonight:

Rain in the south becoming focussed in the far southeast where some heavy bursts continuing. Showers persisting in northern and northeastern parts. Dry elsewhere and chilly, particularly in west.

Thursday:

Any rain in far southeast soon clearing. Then sunny spells and showers, most frequent in north and northeast whilst southwest parts mostly dry. Staying cool and breezy in the east.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

Sunny spells and scattered showers, which could be heavy with hail in a few places. Mainly light winds. Rather cold by day; chilly nights and occasional air frost.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.